MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:
Gentlemen—At your request I have obtained in open market samples of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS and ALCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, and have submitted them to chemical analysis to determine their comparative merits as external remedies.
I think there is very little room for doubt that the medical ingredients which do not exist in ALCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS render it far superior to those of ALCOCK'S.
Very truly yours,

POETICAL.

THE HAMMER AND THE SAW.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

There's the music of the birds,
And the music of the bees;
There's the music of the forests
In the grand old trees;
Nature's symphony is sweet,
And without a single flaw,
Yet there was nothing like the music
Of the Hammer and the Saw.
Hail to Liberty and Peace!
Hail to Order, Heaven's first law;
And the world's ennobling chorus
Of the Hammer and the Saw.

Though the little birds may sing,
And the balmy zephyrs blow,
Yet the larder may be empty,
And the wheat crop low;
But when labor strikes a note,
Then the heart that was in awe
Dances lightly to the music
Of the Hammer and the Saw.
Hail to Liberty and Peace!
Hail to Order, Heaven's first law;
And the world's ennobling chorus
Of the Hammer and the Saw.

The man may not be skilled
For the harp or for the lyre,
But have caught an inspiration
From auditory noble fire.
He earns my bread and bed,
Though," he cries, "it crust and straw,
While I'm climbing to the music
Of the Hammer and the Saw."
Hail to Liberty and Peace!
Hail to Order, Heaven's first law!
And the world's ennobling chorus
Of the Hammer and the Saw.

SELECT STORY.

A PEACEMAKER.

Old Jasper Trently sat alone in his library one chilly October evening. In fact, he was generally alone, as his solitary life, though of his own choosing, was fast changing him into a gloomy, morose man.

All around him were evidences of wealth; velvet carpets, silken draperies statuary and rare paintings, and a library of well-bound volumes, worth of themselves a small fortune; but there was an aching void in his crusty, old heart, that even these things failed to fill.

Over the mantle hung a portrait, a handsome, boyish face with frank, blue eyes and a sensitive, smiling mouth. The poise of the head betokened pride and self-will, and the square chin looked very resolute, but the eyes were kind and true, and these lent a charm to the whole countenance.

Old Jasper looked up at the handsome, smiling face and sighed. He would have the portrait hung there where he could see it every day, even though its original was banished from his sight forever.

And sometimes, when he felt the resentment dying out of his heart and his pride giving way to kinder feelings, he would turn away from the picture, lost in his softer mood, the tender lips and pleading eyes make him yield the forgiveness for which the man was too proud to ask.

"A young lady, sir," announced the butler at the door, and the old man started from his reverie. Calls were not frequent at Trently Manor.

"I'll see her here," he said, shortly.

She came in timidly, a small, slender girl with a pretty, oval face, and dark, wistful eyes. Jasper Trently glanced her over with a look of approval and motioned her to a seat.

"Your face looks familiar," he said, "yet I do not recollect having seen you before."

"I am Hilda Vinton," she answered; "Percy Vinton's daughter."

The old man started from his seat.

"Percy Vinton's daughter!" he exclaimed. "Is it possible? Well, yes, you have your father's features. What brings you here?"

His manner was not unkind, though he spoke so brusquely.

"I have been an orphan for a year," Hilda said, and her voice quivered. "They both died in France, and I was thrown on my own resources. Father never found the fortune he was expecting, you know.

"No, though we both started together in life. He was a dreamy man, never meant for real work, though I remember his wild talk about the wealth he would have one day. Poor fellow! so he's dead!"

He stared at the glowing coals with dreamy eyes, and shook his bald head sadly. Then his mood changed, and he leaned forward in his chair with flushing face.

"I tried to keep him steady," he said, excitedly, "but it was no use. He was like a rolling stone, here, there, and all over, and precious little moss he ever gathered. When he planned that foolish expedition to Europe I was thoroughly vexed with him, but when he married a pretty French singer the first year without a cent to live on I washed my hands of him altogether."

"She was a good wife," Hilda said, gently. Then, when the old man's excitement had subsided, she continued: "Father mentioned the quarrel, but before he died he told me what staunch friends you used to be, and though he hadn't heard from you for years, he had kept track of you and gave me your address. He told me if I was ever in trouble to come to you, and he was sure you would help me. I did my best for awhile, but I was poor and unknown, and everything went wrong, so I made up my mind to take father's advice, and—"

"And here you are," interrupted Jasper Trently. "Poor Percy! Well, he was a good fellow, after all, though no man for business."

"I have been well educated," said Hilda, "and thought, with your influence, I might secure a good position as governess. I am willing to work hard, sir."

Jasper Trently surveyed her with kindly favor. He admired her spirit, and her face, so like her father's despite its foreign eyes and complexion, awakened the dormant affection for his old friend.

The little ormulu clock chimed ten.

"We'll talk it over to-morrow. You look tired, and doubtless need rest," he said, and rang for the housekeeper.

They met again early the next morning. The old man told Hilda his purpose at once.

"I need some one here; the place is lonely. If you will stay, I will remunerate you well," he said.

His first thought had been to offer her a home there without duties or compensation, but he thought that she was too proud to accept a dependent position, and adroitly worded his proposal.

Hilda Vinton thanked him with tears of gratitude in her eyes.

"Are you sure you need me, sir?" she asked. "I did not expect this."

"Yes, I need you. There is no one I would rather have here than Percy Vinton's daughter."

There's the music of the forests
In the grand old trees;
Nature's symphony is sweet,
And without a single flaw,
Yet there was nothing like the music
Of the Hammer and the Saw.
Hail to Liberty and Peace!
Hail to Order, Heaven's first law;
And the world's ennobling chorus
Of the Hammer and the Saw.

So Hilda remained at Trently Manor.

The days went by. Gradually there came a change of affairs in the lonely mansion. It lost its old gloominess; the silken curtains were parted to admit the sunlight, fresh flowers from the conservatory filled the empty vases, the old-fashioned piano was uncovered, and its tones, clear and sweet as in the olden time, echoed through the vast rooms, when Hilda's dainty fingers pressed the yellow keys.

Old Jasper grew cheerful and genial under the sunny influence, and life assumed a brighter aspect to him. But he was not quite content.

Hilda found him one day leaning on the library mantle with his eyes on the portrait above. They wore a wistful expression, and his face looked sad and grave, almost regretful.

"Who is it sir?" she asked, softly.

The old man frowned on her, then turned with sudden impulse.

"That's Charlie, my nephew, Charlie," he said, with emotion. "I have never spoken of him to you, my dear, but he is seldom out of my mind. We used to get along famously, but he was wild a bit, and self-willed, and one day we quarreled. I don't think either of us meant one word we said then, but we were both very angry, and the end of it was I ordered him from my house forever. He took me at my word, and I have never seen him since."

"You loved him, sir?" asked Hilda.

"As my own son," he answered, then with sudden bitterness, "But he did wrong. I was in the right, and he was too stubborn to yield. I told him I would never forgive him."

"O, I'm sure you will."

Hilda laid her hand on the old man's arm and looked at him with wistful eyes. They had grown to be very fond of each other, and the bright young girl held a deep place in the old man's affections.

"I'm sure you will," she repeated. "He was such a boy then, you know, and he has repented."

"How do you know?" old Jasper asked, fiercely. "He will never repent, I tell you."

"He looks too kind and true to harbor resentment long," said Hilda. "Won't you write to him, sir, and tell him he may come back?"

He shook his head slowly and his features grew hard and cold again. He was not ready to yield just yet, but Hilda hoped that at some future day he would grant her request and for his wayward nephew.

Summer came and passed. It was October again, but Jasper Trently did not dread now the coming winter with its bleak days and long, weary nights.

He was lonely no longer; Hilda became a constant companion, brightening his life with her sunny presence and whiling away the hours that were once so tedious.

Sitting one evening at twilight at the old piano, she began the ballad of "Robin Adair." With the first notes old Jasper started up and laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Don't, don't," he exclaimed, tremulously; "that was always Charlie's favorite. Don't sing it."

Hilda had never seen him so moved; she thought it would be a good opportunity to plead for the absent lad, and began without delay, earnestly and appealingly while the old man listened and did not silence her.

"Oh, sir, please forgive him; I know he is sorry. It will be best for you both. Won't you forgive him?"

"But I was right," persisted the old man.

"Yes, I know; but he was so young and thoughtless. I don't think he deserves such severe punishment."

"Well, perhaps not."

"Then you forgive him, and take it all back?"

"Well, yes, I'll forgive him."

Old Jasper spoke reluctantly, but Hilda knew that he would not retract his words.

"And you will write and tell him so?" she added.

A change came over the old man's face; it grew sad and thoughtful.

"Alas! I don't know where he is now," he answered; "but I will try to find him."

Hilda rose from the piano and knelt at his side.

"Mr. Trently," she said, slowly, "I too must ask forgiveness. Would you grant it when I tell you I have deceived you?"

"Deceived me? I cannot understand."

Briefly she related her story.

"Before father died we met your nephew, Charlie Trently. Father welcomed him at once, for your sake, and he visited us very often. Then when I was left alone I had no other friend, so I turned to him, and—and a few months later we were married."

She looked up timidly at old Jasper's face, but it was non-committal and he maintained a grim silence.

"I did it for Charlie's sake," she went on. "He was willing to return to you, but he said it would be useless, so I came, and—and—oh, Mr. Trently, can you ever forgive me?"

For a moment the old man sat silent and motionless, then, to her surprise, he bent and kissed her forehead.

"You have done me a great favor, my dear," he said, gently, and thought of the past years, lonely and profitless, before this young girl came. With those in mind he would not resent her deception; then, too, he was touched by her devotion and perseverance.

Charlie came a few days later, and the old feud was forgotten.

During the years that followed it would be difficult to find a happier trio than old father Trently, of Trently Manor; his nephew Charlie, and the idol of both loyal hearts, sweet, womanly Hilda, the little peacemaker.

He had Loved Another.

"Tie up the dog."

The tender gray twilight of a June evening was settling down upon the earth as Natalie McIntoch spoke these words, and as she threw up a light shawl over her pretty white shoulders, whose rounded curves and soft flesh tints contrasted so well with the brilliant colors of the garment, and stepped out upon the lawn, where the star-eyed pansies and modest pinks were rearing their heads alongside the velvety green of the close trimmed grass plot that stretched away to the westward, the picture was indeed a pretty one. Passing through the flower beds and down the graveled walk until she came to a clump of willows, whose light branches were just stirred by the whisper of the night wind that came from the south, the girl stood there peering wistfully into the gloaming. Brushing away with her dimpled hand the fluffy mass of golden hair that the sighing wind had blown over her white forehead, Natalie drew the shawl more about her and sat down on a little rustic bench, whose cosy look made it a fit place indeed for love's tryst and vigil.

Presently George W. Simpson entered the gate, and was soon by her side. For an instant no word was spoken between them, and as they stood there, her arms about his neck, her head upon his shoulder, Natalie felt that life without this man was a starless blank. Here was a deep, trusting, if-the-rope-breaks-we-are-gone love that made her voice falter and die away when she spoke to George about it, and yet back of it all there was ever a nameless fear, a vague terror, that seemed to rise like a mystic dreamland that was part of her nature, and tinged the brightest and happiest moments of her life with a sense of melancholy.

"You love me?" she asked, looking up to George with eyes which shone the radiance of a tender beautiful passion; "love me better than all the world beside, better than you ever loved anyone in your whole life?"

George did not answer, for as she spoke there came to him a haunting memory of dark, splendid eyes, a bright face, smiling and radiant, dimpled and dewy, scarlet lips that had often met his own in sweet, clinging, don't-let-go-if-you-value your life kisses. He thought of all this as he bent tenderly over Natalie, her golden hair touching his cheek, and the perfume of the lilies she wore mingling with his breath.

The girl noticed his silence. "Why do you not answer?" she said.

George did not reply, but, drawing her still closer to him, would have kissed her again.

"I want no kisses," she exclaimed, passionately, withdrawing herself from his arms, "from lips that are not sacred to me alone. I have given you all that a woman can give—the love of her whole nature. My heart has been a lute for you to play upon, my whole existence a constant striving to make my love for you a holy, pure and beautiful one. For your sake I have looked renunciation in the face with tearless eyes, I have given you much that is dear to me, and yet when I ask you if you love me there comes no answer from your lips, and your eyes do not look into mine," and drawing herself up in the imperious, whoa-Emma way that befitted her so well, she sat down on the rustic bench with a dull, sickening thud that told too plainly of a broken bustle.

In an instant George was by her side, and Natalie was sobbing as if her heart would break. "Forgive me, darling," he murmured, in low bock beer tones.

"I do," Natalie replied; "but tell me, sweetheart, tell me truly, did you ever love nother?"

"Do not ask me that," said George.

"But I demand an answer," exclaimed the girl, passionately, "and I again ask you if you ever loved another?"

"I did," he replies, "loved her wildly, madly."

"Who was it?" she asks, her cheeks aflame with the hot flush of anger.

Bending low over her, George whispers in her left ear the fatal words, "Lydia Pinkham!" and with a hollow, mocking laugh, flees into the darkness.

Rothchild's Maxims.

According to George Francis Train, the late Baron Rothchild had the following excellent maxims framed on his bank wall:

Attend carefully to the details of your business.
Be prompt in all things.
Consider well, then decide positively.
Dare to do right. Fear to do wrong.
Endure trial patiently.
Fight life's battles bravely, manfully.
Get not into society of the vicious.
Hold intergrity sacred.
Injure not another's reputation or business.
Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind free from evil thoughts.
Lie not for any consideration.
Make few acquaintances.
Never try to appear what you are not
Observe good manners.
Pay your debts promptly.
Question not the veracity of a friend.
Respect the counsel of your parents.
Sacrafice money rather than principle.
Touch not, taste not, handle not intoxicating drinks.
Use your leisure time for improvement.
Venture not upon the threshold of wrong.
Watch carefully over your passions.
Extend to every one a kindly salutation.
Yield not to discouragements.
Zealously labor for the right.
And success is certain.

The Diamond Match Company absorbed two small match manufactures during April, and now own and control all the leading match factories in this country. The company has secured patents on all improved match-making machinery used in its works, and has made binding contracts with its best employes for many years' service. The company has purchased all the timber lands of Michigan in the market, and owns many hundred acres.

Eschew Strong Drink Inflexibly.

Alcohol is a poison as essentially and demnostrably as arsenic is, and, like arsenic and most other poisons, may sometimes be fully used to kill a disease and save the life of its victim. Never fancy that a little alcohol can do no harm, though much aclohol may; for the alcohol diffused through a gallon of beer or cider is just as poisonous as though it were consigned into a bottle of whisky or a flask of brandy. No liquor stimulates except by the natural effect of the alcohol it contains or conceaes, and men have died of alcoholic poisoning whose only stimulant was cider. The number hurried to their graves by lager beer is very great, though these victims generally finish their career on some kind of distilled spirits. In my judgment whiskey honestly distilled from grain, is among the least deadly of the alcoholic stimulants, though a quart of it will poison more than a quart of beer or cider, because and only because it contains a much larger portion of alcohol. But in fact there is no honestly distilled liquor—or next to none—because it has been ascertained that an eccentable beverage (whether malt or spiritous) can be produced, far cheaper by adding other poisons than by relying on alcohol alone. "I know" said an ex-distiller recently, "that there is no honest whiskey now made. Do you ask how I know it? Because I know adding strychnine to the mash insures a production of twenty per cent more liquor than could otherwise be obtained, and there is not twenty per cent, margin for profit on the business. Now men do not make whiskey for philanthrophy's sake—they make it for profit, and stop making when profit is dented them. So whiskey making has fallen necessarily and exclusively into the hands of those who do not scruple to us strychnnei, and there it must remain." Every observing old person will tell you that delirium tremens, palsy, apoplexy, epilepsy, etc., as results of drinking, are far more common now than they were half a century ago, and the reason is not that alcohol is more deadly, but that other poisons have been added to it that equally say the citadel of life. Young men, as you love your God, your country, your families, and yourselves, be entreated neither to make nor sell, diffuse nor imbibe, any kind of alcoholic beverage.

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. Elwell, J. K. Bittenbender., } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, JUNE 15, 1883.

Speaker Faunce is receiving high praise from the press, irrespective of party, for the very able and satisfactory manner in which he performed his arduous duties. He never lost control of the House, and his decisions were fair and generally right. He deserves all that is said of him.

Ex-Senator Simon Cameron visited Governor Pattison recently, and among other things spoken of, commended him for the success of his administration and the discretion employed in the exercise of the veto power.

To the credit of the present legislature be it said, that the last hours of its session were not spent in a drunken debauch, which is more than can be said of many past legislatures. No liquor was allowed in the retiring rooms of either branch, and the last breath of the regular session was a sober one.

An enterprising railroad in Ohio, the Cleveland, Akron and Columbus railway, has made a new departure in its time tables, by adopting a system which has been approved of, but not ventured upon by many railway companies in the country. On its time cards the hours are numbered from one up to twenty-four, the latter being midnight. The confusion which so often exists between the A. M. and P.M. hours is thus avoided. Thus one train arrives in Cleveland at 19:30 and one departs from Columbus at 17 o'clock. This road also carries upon its morning trains weather signals, devised and set by the Ohio Meteorological Bureau, from predictions furnished by the United States Weather Service. It is believed to be the first railroad in the country, if not in the world, to adopt either of these schemes.

Republican organs are criticising the Governor for calling an extra session of the Legislature, on the ground of the great expense to the State. They forget that the Governor is simply performing his duty in compelling the Legislature to do that which is clearly pointed out by the constitution, namely, that once in ten years the State shall be apportioned into legislative, congressional and judicial districts. The failure to do this at the regular session was not the fault of the Democrats, but of the Republican Senate which would not agree that fair apportionments should be made, based on the vote of the State, and preferred the present apportionment which is more favorable to them than a new one will probably be. If the Governor had not called an extra session these same organs would now be making capital out of his failure to do so. So it goes.

The divorce business has received a severe shock at the hands of Judge Thayer of Philadelphia, who has just set aside a decree in the case of Major Nickerson on the ground that he obtained a divorce by fraud and imposition on the court. The laws of Pennsylvania permit an application for divorce when either a husband or wife wilfully deserts the other for a period of two years. In this case Nickerson sent his wife to Europe, wrote to her for a time and sent her money. When he ceased writing to her he continued to send money to the daughter who was with her mother. At the expiration of two years he applied for a divorce, alleging that his wife had deserted him. He went through the usual form before a commissioner to take testimony; proved that his wife had not lived with him for the two years, and obtained a decree of separation. It was not until this stage of the case was reached that Mrs. Nickerson had any knowledge of the proceedings, and she was greatly shocked to learn that she was no longer the wife of her husband. In the mean time, Nickerson had married another woman. The friends of Mrs. Nickerson took the matter up, and after a full investigation the court has set aside the proceedings and annulled the decree. This puts Nickerson in a very undesirable plight and at latest reports he has skipped to Canada with No. 2. When the laws of the state are in such a condition that such a fraud can be perpetrated under the eyes of the court, it is high time for a revision. Judge Thayer points out the defects of the law and makes some wholesome suggestions. The next legislature should overhaul the subject and enact a law that will prevent such frauds in the future.

THAT $75,00.

The Catawissa Item in commenting upon our remarks on the payment of $75,00 out of the county treasury for saving the bridge at the Paper mill from fire, says, that it is "informed by Hon. F. L. Ikeman that the money ($75,00 was paid to him, and less $14,00 ($5,00 for refreshments furnished the men on the evening of the fire, and $9,00 in hands of William Berkheimer for further refreshments, which have not been furnished and which he has been ordered to refund for deposit with the balance) placed to the credit of the Catawissa Fire Department in the Catawissa Deposit Bank."

We have no special objection to Catawissa's taking all she can get out of the county for the benefit of her fire department, but the payment of this money is a bad precedent to establish, and ought not to be allowed. If the county pay $75 for saving a bridge worth perhaps $1000, from fire, how much would it be expected to pay the Bloomsburg fire department for saving either the Court House or jail in case of fire? Bloomsburg has a regularly organized fire department of three chartered companies, and the town has invested several thousand dollars in apparatus, without asking the county to contribute a cent towards the protection of its property. If Catawissa has a fire department when was it organized, and who is authorized to expend this money for the benefit of that department? It seems however that all the money was not appropriated to the "fire department." Fourteen dollars of it was placed in the hands of a saloon keeper, for "refreshments" furnished the men. As the fire occurred just after supper time these "refreshments" were undoubtedly of a liquid form, but the appropriation was too large for the occassion, and so a portion of it is to be refunded. The explanation given by the Item furnishes no excuse for this unwarranted payment by the county, and the commissioners should be held accountable for it.

DUKES KILLED.

James Nutt, son of Captain Nutt who was shot by N. L. Dukes in Uniontown, shot and killed Dukes on the street in that town on Wednesday evening. It is said Nutt has been brooding over his father's death, and had fully determined to slay his father's murderer. Dukes died immediately, four shots taking effect. An honest jury on Dukes' trial would have prevented this tragedy by hanging the villain.

Randall and the Speakership.

The Pittsburg Post, one of the staunchest advocates of Samuel J. Randall's candidacy for the speakership, recently published the following editorial:

Now we venture the statement on good authority, careful observation and extended inquiry, that Mr. Randall has, at this time, in the Southern States from thirty to forty supporters for the speakership among the members elect, and in the Northern States from sixty to seventy supporters. Were the caucus held to day he would go into it with not less than 100 votes, and this is ample to nominate.

It will be increased between this time and the first Monday of December by the sound sense of the people operating on their representatives. Nothing is said to be sure in love, war and politics, but the re-election of Samuel J. Randall as Speaker is one of those things that come mighty close to certainty—about as close as any future event can be reckoned.

The Extra Session.

The following is the Governor's message convening the Legislature in extra session:

HARRISBURG, June 6.—To the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania—GENTLEMEN: By virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution, I hereby convene you in extraordinary session on Thursday, the seventh day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, at twelve o'clock noon of that day. In the judgment of the executive such an extraordinary occasion has arisen as to require the exercise of this power. The constitution commands the general assembly immediately after each United States decennial census to apportion the state into senatorial and representative districts. This imperative mandate has not been obeyed. By the joint rules of your houses the time has gone by when any bills disclosing a purpose to perform this duty can be presented to me for approval.

The obligation is imposed upon the governor to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," I deem it my duty, therefore, to exhaust my lawful authority to correct the grave default of the legislature. Equally important and necessary, though not so specifically commanded by law, is the duty of the assembly to apportion the state into congressional and judicial districts. I, therefore, designate the apportionment of the state into senatorial, representative, congressional and judicial districts as subjects for legislative consideration.

The right of the people to fair, just and lawful representation in the legislative councils of the state and Union is secured by the constitution, and must not be denied. The importance of the right cannot be over-estimated. It is the essential principle of our form of government. It underlies all our political rights. It is to be jealously guarded, carefully conserved and faithfully carried out.

The time is peculiarly fitting for the passage of bills to secure a fair, just, equitable and non-partisan apportionment of the state. The two houses of the assembly are composed of majorities of different party affiliations. A greater degree of fairness is to be expected from such a condition of the legislative body than if it was dominated in both branches by majorities of the same party convictions. Each house will prove a check upon the other in any attempt to obtain unfair advantages. Mutual concessions and a spirit of conciliation ought to result in an adjustment of the differences of the two houses and the prompt passage of bills fair in spirit, giving just representation to the people in all sections of the state.

In addressing ourselves to these subjects, we must keep constantly in view the guide provided in the constitution directing that the legislative districts shall be "composed of compact and contiguous districts as nearly equal in population as may be." This is a plain and simple rule, established for our guidance by the fundamental law. To follow it in its spirit will result in just conclusions. There ought not to be any doubt of the legislature speedily agreeing upon the subjects designated for their consideration. It is their duty to agree. A further delay in this matter will result in at least six years of the decade elapsing without the apportionment required by law being made. To prevent such an indefensible condition of affairs I have deemed it obligatory upon me to proclaim this call for an extraordinary session. I have selected a time for your assembling immediately succeeding the day of adjournment of your regular session, so as not to necessiate your recall after you had dispersed to your homes. In this way the expense of the session will be lessened as the machinery for the conduct of business of the assembly is ready for use. I reluctantly convene the legisiature at this season of the year. Nothing but a sense of imperative duty impels me to adopt this course. I hope, however, in a few days you will have concluded your labors to the satisfaction of the people, and having discharged your constitutional duties will be able to return again to your families and homes.

ROBERT E. PATTISON.

In obedience to the call the legislature met on Thursday at 12 o'clock, and after the introduction of several apportionment bills adjourned until June 19th. There was considerable discussion about the pay during the vacation, but there is no doubt that every member will draw his ten dollars a day from the state while he is at home attending to his private affairs.

Lynch Law in the West.

The Barber Brothers were taken from jail by a mob last Friday night at Waverly, Iowa, and hung to a tree. The mob was composed of men from Fayette county, and was led by a brother of Deputy Sheriff Sheppard, who was killed by the Barber brothers last fall at West Union. The Sheriff refused to give up the keys of the jail, whereupon the mob battered down the doors with sledge hammers. After a short delay inside, the lynchers brought the criminals out, with ropes tied around their necks. Neither of them flinched a particle and they did not even plead for mercy at any stage of the proceedings.

Judge Foraker has been nominated by the Republicans for Governor of Ohio.

A Union of Coal Companies.

A dispatch from Philadelphia announces that an agreement between the Philadelphia and Reading, the New Jersey Central, and the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Railroads regarding the coal combinations has been made. It is said that these roads control more than one-half of the entire anthracite coal production, and that the Lehigh Valley and Pennsylvania coal companies have agreed to enter the combination. Under this agreement it is claimed that more than 30,000,000 tons of coal will be mined and marketed at circular rates this year. A meeting of representatives of the roads interested in the combination will be held, it is said, some time next month to determine the winter schedule of prices. The dispatch also says: "The agreement between the Reading Railroad Company, as lessee of the Jersey Central Railroad Company, and the Lehigh Navigation Company has been signed by the presidents of both these companies, and is now in New York awaiting the signature of the Jersey Central Railroad President.

An Important Bill.

SAFETY IN CASE OF FIRE FOR EMPLOYES AND OTHERS.

An important bill for safety in case of fire of persons employed in factories and other buildings needing fire escapes has been signed by the governor, it having passed both branches of the legislature. The bill prescribes that all buildings needing fire escapes shall, in addition, have securely fastened to six window heads chains ten feet long, to which shall be attached thick ropes of sufficient length to reach to the ground. The ropes are to be placed on the window sills, and must be accessible to anybody in the building. Hotels must provide every room above the second story with such chains and ropes. Failure to comply with these regulations renders the offender liable to a fine of $300, and to damages arising from loss of life or limb in case of fire. The third section of the act prescribes that "tenants or lessees of any building used for the purpose of manufacturing, hotel, boarding house, seminary or other building which is required by law to have fire escapes attached, and to which such fire escapes have not been erected, after giving the landlord or his agent thirty days notice to erect suitable fire escapes, and on his refusal or neglect to erect the same within the time specified and in said notice, may erect and maintain suitable and legal fire escapes, and collect the cost of erection and maintainance from the landlord or his agent in an action the same as for debt, or may set off the cost thereof against rent then due or thereafter coming due."

Riot at Wilkesbarre Races.

While the race between Trinkett, Echo and Thorn was in progress at Lee Park, last Friday afternoon, a disturbance occurred at a gambling booth on the grounds which came very near ending in a general riot. Constable Tammany, assisted by three other men, made an attempt to arrest the gamblers and seize the money in their possession, when a fierce riot ensued.

The constables used their clubs with terrible effect over the heads of the gamblers and beat them in a shameful manner. As a matter of self-defense the gamblers pulled out their revolvers and threatened to shoot the constables if they did not desist.

In the meantime the large number of spectators who crowded the main stand left their seats and hastened to the scene of the disturbance, and a scene of the wildest confusion ensued. Ladies cried with fear, and the men, who now formed a howling mob, cried out at the top of their voices that Tammany and his followers should be lynched.

In the midst of the confusion a revolver was discharged, and the crowd, thinking it was the work of the constables, called loudly "Ropes to hang them!" and one man actually went in pursuit of a piece of hemp. The officers of the law put in an appearance and the crowd began to scatter, those having revolvers in their hands placing them back in their pockets, but still swearing vengeance against the Tammanyites.

The authorities at once ordered the arrest of the constables for attempting to create a riot and making arrests for which they had no legal authority. The gamblers were released and the races proceeded. Had not the officers of the law put in an appearance just when they did it is believed that Tammany would have been shot, as the crowd were in sympathy with the gamblers, whose names are John S. Morrison, H. Mitchell, A. H. Becker, H. Bauser and Harry Hamilton. Bauser was terribly beaten over the head with a club in the hands of Tammany while defending his money bags. Twelve hundred dollars of the money is said to be missing. Tammany and his party were arraigned before Alderman Parsons.

Abdication of the Queen.

RUMORS THAT HER MAJESTY WILL VACATE THE BRITISH THRONE.

For some time there have been reports in circulation as to the precarious condition of the health of Queen Victoria, but some of them have been denied. It would appear, however, there must be some truth in them. The Washington Sunday Herald says:

A representative of one of the prominent European powers tells us that a very serious event is impending in England, which is the abdication of the Queen. The reasons given for this most unexpected course are Her Majesty's fast failing health and increasing unwillingness and sometimes an inability on her part to perform the duties incident to government. For some years the Queen has been a mild believer in Spiritualism. She thought the spirit of her dead husband used to assist her in working out the questions which perplexed and sometimes annoyed her.

Since the death of her favorite servant, John Brown, she has been very much depressed, and finally it was necessary to remove her to Balmoral, where some of her happiest days were spent with the lover and husband of her youth. I am told that some very pathetic scenes took place at her last visit there. She seemed to feel the actual presence of her dead Prince, and talked as though he were by her side.

This and other occurrences frightened her daughter Beatrice very greatly, and she insisted that some of the other members of the family should come down at once. It was telegraphed from London, by the embassador of a great power, to his sovereign that the abdication of the Queen of England was impending, and would probably occur very soon. From any other than this reliable source I should doubt it. The Queen has clung to the visible endowments of the throne with such tenacity that she must have greatly changed before the thought was bearable, but the breakdown of her health has been followed by melancholia of the most pronounced type.

It seems not be generally known that the trouble of the Queen's knee comes from a large ulcer, of a scrofulous and cancerous nature, that has formed under the knee joint, and in spite of all that can be done, is eating its way through sinew and nerve to the bone, and her condition is very serious indeed.

PINAFORE.

Songs Never Sung.

"How does that verse run? Something like this, isn't it?

"There are who touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them;
Alas! for those who never sing,
But die with all their music in them.'"

"Yes, that's beautiful, pathetic and true," said your representative. "The poet alludes to people who are somehow suppressed, and never get their full allowance of joy and air. Which reminds me of a letter shown me the other day by Hiscox & Co., of New York, signed by Mr. E. C. Williams, of Chapman, Snyder Co., Pa., a prominent business man of that place. He writes:

"I have suffered with asthma for over forty years, and had a terrible attack in December and January, 1882. I hardly know what prompted me to take PARKER'S TONIC. I did so, and the first day I took four doses. The effect astonished me. That night I slept as if nothing was the matter with me, and have ever since. I have had colds since, but no asthma. My breathing is now as perfect as if I had never known that disease. If you know of any one who has asthma tell him in my name that PARKER'S TONIC will cure it—even after forty years.' There was a man who escaped the fate of those whom the poet laments.

This preparation, which has therefore been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. Inasmuch as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, and unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

IT LEADS ALL.

No other blood-purifying medicine is made, or has ever been prepared, which so completely meets the wants of physicians and the general public as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases. If there is a lurking taint of Scrofula about you,

SCROFULA AYER'S SARSAPARILLA will dislodge it and expel it from your system.

For constitutional or scrofulous Catarrh,

CATARRH AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is the true remedy. It has cured numberless cases. It will stop the nauseous catarrhal discharges, and remove the sickening odor of the breath, which are indications of scrofulous origin.

ULCEROUS SORES "Hutto, Tex., Sept. 28, 1882. "At the age of two years one of my children was terribly afflicted with ulcerous running sores on its face and neck. At the same time its eyes were swollen, much inflamed, and very sore. Physicians told us that a powerful alterative medicine must be employed. They united in recommending AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. A few doses produced a perceptible improvement; which, by an adherence to your directions, was continued to a complete and permanent cure. No evidence has since appeared of the existence of any scrofulous tendencies; and no treatment of any disorder was ever attended by more prompt or effectual results. Yours truly, B. F. JOHNSON."

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this popular beverage two men express their minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic lecturder the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. The German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight schooner leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

The Wonderful Efficacy of

DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not a transient one, but is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, but an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What can be the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and breeds on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in time in the first case, when malaria and other epidemics are raging, to keep prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by all druggists at 25c. per box, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

O'Brien's circus was here on Thursday of last week. It was extensively advertised through the county, and quite a number of people were attracted by the flaming posters, so that the attendance both morning and evening was fair. As truthful journalists we cannot speak in very high terms of this circus. Many of the attractions as advertised, did not appear at all, and the best part of the show was the street parade. The field where the canvass was spread was soft ground, and the rain in the afternoon made it much worse, so that it was impossible to judge of what the ring performance might have been under favorable circumstances. One of the most objectionable features is that all kinds of swindling games are permitted under the canvas. Whether the proprietors are aware of this or not, we cannot say, but it is nevertheless true that a number of rascals are permitted to play their games, and to take in the unwary countryman. Several instances of this kind have come to our knowledge. As compared with Barnum or Forepaugh, O'Brien's show is about fifth class.

A Large Turtle.

On Saturday morning last, there came to town by Adams Express from Baltimore, a huge green turtle weighing 170 pounds, consigned to Mrs. Shoemaker, Bloomsburg. As Moyer Bros., the express agents, were unable to find any one by that name who claimed the turtle, or knew anything about it, they were in a quandary for some time as to what to do with it. It was alive and kicking, and had to be cared for, so a hogshead was filled with water, and the monster placed therein. A telegram to Baltimore brought the answer that the turtle was for "Cooney Shoemaker, the saloon keeper," whereupon it was delivered to "Cooney" Girton for whom it was no doubt intended. About two months ago two friends of his were here and promised to send him a big turtle, but he got no letter, and the mistake in the name caused the difficulty. The turtle was on exhibition in front of Girton's until Tuesday, when it was killed and served up to his customers in soup and steaks.

A Singular Case.

A singular and distressing misfortune has prostrated the 18-year old daughter of Wm. McNinch, of Cooper twp. On Monday of last week, she experienced what the physician in attendance, W. H. McReynolds, of Blooomsburg, pronounced catalepsy, and until the subsequent Wednesday her body remained rigid, losing all life-like expression, and only by the tests applied was the fact of her still living made apparent. On Wednesday the rigidity partly relaxed and she gained the power of sight and hearing, but speech has been denied her and she is as yet entirely helpless Since then she has remained in this condition. She refuses food, and seems to feel that all endearments are contaminating, for when touched by any one she makes strenuous efforts to rub off the spot attinged. Her affliction has naturally been a matter of much grief to her relatives and friends, who have, in addition to the physician named, sought the assistance of several members of the medical profession, among them, Dr. S. S. Shultz, Superintendent of the Asylum, but without avail.—Danville Intelligencer.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

WHY THEY CALL HIM "OLD MAN."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and is falling out before its time. Use something? I would, but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you "Old Man Jenkins." It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

The need of merit for promoting personal aesthetics is due to J. C. Ayer & Co., whose incomparable Hair Vigor is a universal beautifier of the hair. Harmless, effective, agreeable, it has taken rank among the indispensable articles of the toilet. To scanty locks it gives luxuriance; and withered hair it clothes with the hue of youth.

MUCH INFORMATION.

FOR THE TABLE, &c.

Bangs and crimps are worn further from the eyebrows.

Summer and washing silks will be in vogue this year.

Lace and embroidery are equally fashionable for trimming.

Gloves and mitts contrast with, instead of matching costumes.

Facetted pearls are much used upon upright collars of silk evening toilets.

Heavy Spanish guipure in all the new colors come as trimmings for the ottoman silks.

Flounces and ribbons with ragged jagged edges called cock's-combs are coming in vogue.

New fancy grenadines are heavily brocaded, and closely resemble brocaded silks and satins.

Jersey basques will be much worn with plaid skirts of wool, and wool and silk mixtures.

Black silk stockings are more worn at present than they have been for thirty years or more.

In straw hats and bonnets the color of crushed raspberry is produced in delicate shades closely resembling periwinkle pink.

Sultan is the name of a new dark red; pense rogue an odd shade of purple; and vert clair is another peculiar tint added to the long list of greens.

The prettiest way of using velvet ribbon is to arrange loops of it that lap in the shape of a pointed vest, and edge the basque, neck and sleeves with three rows of loops, or two rows loops with an end of notched velvet ribbons.

FISH STUFFING.—Stuffing for a baked fish should be made of fine bread crumbs, highly seasoned with pepper, salt and sage. One or two raw eggs beaten in with it also gives flavor to it. A little butter is needed if the fish is not too oily.

MOSQUITOES.—To keep mosquitoes away dip a piece of flannel or sponge in camphorated spirits, and make it fast to the top of the bedstead. A decoction of pennyroyal, or some of the bruised leaves, rubbed on the exposed parts, will effectively keep off these troublesome insects.

SPICED BEEF.—Spiced beef, which is delicious cold and sliced thin, is easily prepared. Choose a piece with less fat than you would wish to have in a roast; boil this until tender in water in which you have put salt, pepper, celery seed and clover; the amount to depend on your taste.

RICE WAFFLES.—One quart of flour; half a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar; two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; one large tablespoonful of butter; two eggs; one and a half pints of milk; one cupful of hot boiled rice. Sift the flour, salt, sugar and baking powder well together, rub the butter into the flour, beat the eggs well, separately, and add the stiff whites last of all.

PINEAPPLE PUDDING.—Butter a pudding dish, and line the bottom and sides with slices of stale cake (sponge cake is the best), pare and slice thin a large pineapple; place in the dish first a layer of pineapple, then strew with sugar, then more pineapple, and so on until all is used. Pour over a small teacupful of water, and cover with slices of cake which have been dipped in cold water; cover the whole with a buttered plate, and bake slowly for two hours.

BUNS.—Two quarts of warm water, two pounds of sugar, one and a half pounds of butter, two ounces of allspice, six eggs beaten by themselves, one pint of yeast. Put the flour, yeast and water together about as thick as pudding, set by the fire, let it rise to a sponge, and mix the sugar and butter together. Then beat the whole together after rising and knead in flour enough, but not very stiff; make the buns small, and brush them over with egg just as you put them into the oven.

THE SHINE ON SILK.—A correspondent asks what will remove the "shine" from black silk. This cannot always be done; it depends on how much worn it is; but sometimes it can be freshened surprisingly by sponging with cold coffee and ammonia—a teaspoonful of ammonia to nearly a cupful of coffee. Use a very soft sponge or a flannel cloth; rub very gently; and if possible to get along without so doing, do not iron the silk at all. Spread it out smoothly while damp, and pin the edges to an ironing-table or board, and let it dry in this way. If it is too much wrinkled or folded lay a cloth over the wrong side of the silk after sponging, and iron it.

KISSES.—Whites of six eggs, one pound of pulverized sugar, one drop of rose oil. Put the sugar in the dish first, and drop the whites of eggs (unbeaten) upon it. Beat them together thoroughly for two hours. Drop on tins with a teaspoon, turning spoon round and round until the cakes are very high and end in a point; this will give them a fluted appearance. When baked and still hot, stick two of them to gether, using a little white of egg if necessary. Lay them very carefully upon an inverted sieve to cool. They may also be squeezed through a meringue bag like lady-fingers, or they may be dropped in smooth round cakes.

TOILET SOAP.—Drippings which accumulate in almost every household, can be used for the grease. They should first be boiled in water, and then left to cool; afterward they should be removed from the water and boiled alone until the water is expelled. The whiter the grease can be made the better the soap will be. The ingredients of the soap are six pounds of sal soda, seven pounds of grease, three pounds of unslackened lime, four gallons of soft water, and one half pound of borax. Boil the soda and lime in the water until they are dissolved; let the mixture stand over night to settle; pour off the clear lye, to which add the grease and pulverized borax, and boil to the consistency of honey. Take the mixture from the stove, stir in one ounce of sassafras or lavender, and pour it into a tub, or what is still better, a tight, shallow box, to cool, and when cold cut into bars and put on boards to dry.

An Illinois farmer has employed ants for very useful work, as he reports. He says he is too lazy to pick potato beetles from the vines, and he does not like to use paris green. In this dilemma he bethought himself of the pugnacious character of ants, so he carried into his potato field old pieces of wood, in which ants had established their homes, and left them to do the work. Last year the ants domiciled in two old fence-posts, he says, cleaned all the beetles from a quarter of an acre, although their number was legion.

A Sentence Imposed Upon Murderers at Wolun, Germany, in 1661.

From the Saturday Review.

George Wilde and Hans and Barbara Hahn, were accused of several murders perpetrated near Wolun, in 1659. After a few weeks' confinement they confessed and unfoulded a tale of horrors, of men robbed and murdered on the roadside or in their homes, of violations of women.

George Wilde enumerated thirty-nine murders he had committed, and Hans Hahn owned up to forty murders. Both stated, however, that they could not remember all the persons they had murdered. Hahn's wife confessed to be an accomplice to a number of her husband's murders. The sentence of the was court as follows:

"Be it ordained, That Hans Hahn and George wilde, as an awful example to other similar evildoers, be placed upon a wagon and taken to the public market place, where the first joints of all their fingers, but each separately, shall be torn off with hot pincers, then they shall be dragged by horses over the ground to the place of execution, but so that they do not lose too much strength; there they shall have their arms and legs crushed by blows with an iron wheel; lastly, they are to be tied to a stake and roasted at a slow fire.

"Barbara Hahn is to be taken naked to the place of execution, where her flesh is to be torn by red hot pincers, and then she is to be beheaded with a sword; her corpse is to be laid on the wheel as a frightful example to others.

"All this for justice sake."

This horrible butchery took place on the 24 of July, 1661, at Welun, and was witnessed by George Wilde's father, who looked on with the utmost indifference. He has also witnessed the execution of his daughter without the slightest visible emotion.

A Petrified Forest.

The Albuquerque (N. M.) Journal thus describes the appearance of a petrified forest near Corrizo, on the Little Colorado river: "The road at a distance of ten miles from Corrizo enters an immense basin, the slope being nearly a semicircle, and this enclosed by high banks of shale and white fine clay. Half an hour's good driving from this point takes one to the heart of the forest. The petrified stumps, limbs, and, in fact, whole trees lie about on all sides, the action of the waters for hundreds of years has gradually washed away the high hills round about, and the trees that once covered the high table lands now lie in the valley beneath. Im mense trunks, some of which measure over five feet in diameter, are broken and scattered over a space of three hundred acres. Limbs and twigs cover the sand in every direction and the visitor is puzzled as to where he shall begin to gather the beautiful specimens that lie within easy reach. There are numerous blocks of trunks of this petrified wood which have the appearance of having been just cut down by the woodman's axe, and the chips are thrown around on the ground so that one instinctively picks them up as he would in the log camps of Michigan and Pennsylvania. Many of the small particles and even the whole heart of some trees have now become thoroughly crystalized and the beautiful colored cubes sparkle in the sunshine like so many diamonds. Every color of the rainbow is duplicated in these crysta's. The grain of the wood is plainly shown in nearly every specimen.

Recent Laws.

The Bellefonte Watchman has taken the trouble to arrange the important laws signed by Governor Pattison which are as follows:

Abolishing the sealers of weights and measurers; increasing the gratuity and annuity of the veterans and widows of vererans of the war of 1812; repealing the recorder act of 1878; abolishing the Philadelphia deliuquent tax office; preventing lapse of time from giving a right to keep electric wires perpetually attached to buildings; making ineligible to the office of district attorney any person who shall not have been admitted to the bar two years prior to his election, providing for voluntary tribunals to adjust labor disputes in the iron, steel, glass, textile fabrics and coal trades; providing for the supervision and control of institutions for the insane, prohibiting the levying of license tax upon persons taking orders for goods by sample for individuals or companies who pay the tax at their chief place of business; fixing the standard weight of a bushel of potatoes at sixty pounds; enabling the Philadelphia councils to secure testimony concerning the management of the city departments; repealing the act authorizing market clerks to confiscate short-weight butter, lard, sausage, etc.; regulating the hunting and killing of web-footed wild fowl; preventing the exemption of property on judgement obtained for fifty dollars or less for wages for manual labor; providing for free evening schools for children unable to attend the public day schools; exempting building associations from state tax; to protect dairymen and prevent deception in the sale of butter and cheese, and regulating the business of intelligence or employment offices in Philadelphia.

Good Help Economical.

T. B. Terry, writing in the Ohio Farmer, says it pays to keep help to do every thing in the best possible manner, and just when it ought to be done; it pays to run the farm to its full capacity. If you had hired more help, couldn't you have prepared your wheat-ground a little better last fall? Couldn't you have cut your wheat before it got so ripe as to shell, or before the straw became worthless for food? During the hurry of haying and harvest, couldn't you have saved your potatoes from going to the bugs, and got some of the weeds out of that corn? Couldn't you have got out that stone in the spring, and saved that costly break to your reaper? Couldn't you have got out those stumps that hinder so much when you are plowing and cultivating, and under drained those wet spots where your wheat was killed out? Couldn't you have cut that clover before it got so ripe as to be almost worthless for feed, and had fat horses last winter, instead of bare ribs?

A farmer told me only last week that he lost $100 by letting a piece of grass stand too long last summer; that it was no better than straw for feed: $10 more would have saved it. Another said his hay was like medicine to his cows. With more help he could have cut it early, cured it nicely, doubled its value, and saved most of his feed bill. Two or three dollars' worth more labor spent on your wheat ground, might have paid you, not only on the capital stock, but a profit that the merchant and manufacturer never obtain.

Andrew Johnson's Economy.

Cleveland Leader.

"He was very economical. His circumstances made him so when he was young, and his habits thus acquired stuck to him. He died worth $150,000, and this was purely the accumulation of his salary and interest. He made little or no money outside of his salary. While he was in Congress he accumulated $30,000, and out of his salary as President $70,000. The President's salary was then $25,000. When he studied law he was too poor to buy books, and he spent his leisure time about the courthouse, in Greenville, reading those belonging there. He never kept a horse or carriage, and during his Congressional campaigns he borrowed a neighbor's steed to ride over the district. This was probably one of the reasons why he did not give his children college education. His three sons went to the common county school of the south, and the only academic education given any one of them was to the youngest while he was President, who was then twelve years old. He sent this boy to school for a few months. His daughters were better tracted, and they were at Georgetown while he was in the White House. Perhaps he did not believe in college education. He had gotten along with so little himself.

Beautiful Indian Women.

Many half-breed Cherokee women in the Indian territory, writes a correspondent, are cultivated in mind, beautiful in person, industrious in habit, and will compare well with the more favored women in the North and East. They have magnificent heads of hair, long and black, all their own, and with jet black eyes and pearly teeth, dressed in that fashionable attire in which they all love to appear, they would not be recognized in Eastern drawing-rooms as that part of the original inhabitants of our country known as squaws, a name long since repudiated. Let it be known, then, that white men of worth and character are popular among the beauties of the territory, and four out of five who come to make a home among them marry these dusky maidens, get a citizenship, surround themselves with ample acres and the comforts of life, participate in the affairs of government and become the most active and wealthy citizens of the territory. A chief trait in the character of many white men both in this country and out of it is to get possession of its productive lands. By committing matrimony, they can kill two birds with one stone—get a wife and farm too.

Thinning Garden Vegetables.

Germantown Telegraph.

It is generally a fear with sowers that their seeds will not all grow, and many more are sown than necessary. This is all very well, only it requires so much after cultivation in thinning out, which very few properly do, or if they do it is not done in time to be much benefit to the growing crop. Any one who sees a field of turnips in the autumn will understand what we mean. If the harrow were drawn through when young over one-half the turnip fields the final yield would be one third more. Beets, carrots, salsify, parsnips and similar garden crops should be looked to in season, and reduced so that the plants stand two or three inches apart. This will be found profitable if carefully done. If it is found that the crop is smaller than was anticipated almost any of these will do transplanted. We have seen crops of parsnips and beets so set-out that made better roots than from seed set out in the regular way.

The Cabbage Pest.

For two or three years past the cabbage crop has greatly suffered from the worm, which has become a destructive enemy of this valuable vegetable. Many attempts have been made to get rid of it by resorting to half a score of different appliances; but so dense are the leaves and bulky the head, that it is next to unpossible to dislodge all the worms, concealed as many of them are, in the compact layers. The best remedy—one indeed that seems to be as effectual as under the circumstances, it can be—is to take a half a pound each of hard soap and kerosene oil, dissolve in three gallons of water, with which to thoroughly sprinkle the heads. A single application may be sufficient, but as it may not always be, a second, and perhaps even a third, may be necesary. This preparation has been tested over and over in the most careful manner, and it is regarded, though very simple, as a positive remedy. We print it now in brief, in order that the cultivators of the cabbage may have ample time to be ready for the enemy.

The Lindsay Land and Lumber Company, composed of Iowa and Indiana men, have been buying timber land in Arkansas for some time, and now own 100,000 acres, one-half of which is in the Arkansas Valley. They propose to erect at Little Rock, shortly, one of the most extensive saw mills in the Southwest, which will give employment to 200 men. They estimate that they can cut from their land 1,200,000,000 feet of lumber.

Said the editor to the bore: "It isn't that he doesn't know enough to come in when it rains—he doesn't know enough to stay out when it's not raining."
